

BIG QUESTION

Was the tomb really empty?

On Sunday, women brought spices to the tomb. They expected a body. Instead the stone was rolled away, and a young man in white said, “He has risen! He is not here.”

Back then, a woman's word counted for little. Even the apostles didn't believe them. If you made the story up, you wouldn't pick them as your witnesses.

Peter and John ran to the tomb, and John got there first. Later, guards were paid to say the disciples stole the body. That story admits the tomb was empty.
