

BIG QUESTION

Where do right and wrong come from?

C. S. Lewis noticed that when people quarrel, they point to a standard: “Come on, you promised.” You can only call a line crooked if you know what a straight one is.

That standard isn't just instinct, culture, or opinion. Martin Luther King Jr. told his own state its laws were wrong. Paul says the law is “written on their hearts.”

A law needs a lawgiver, and we have all broken his law. But the one who wrote it came to rescue us. Jesus gave “his life as a ransom for many,” and three days later he rose.

Talk about it

1. You only call a line crooked if you know a straight one. Where did your straight line come from?
2. Can people who don't believe in God be kind and honest? What does that tell us?
3. Jesus came to rescue you. What would you like to tell him?
